Essex Police's paedophile link EXPOSED

● YA wins legal battle to reveal informant's shocking crimes against Essex children

by Charles Thomson

EXCLUSIVE

ESSEX Police has been criticised for potentially endangering children after it was revealed the force recruited a notorious paedophile as an informant.

The YA has this week won a years-long legal battle against Government to force the release of the paedophile informant's criminal record.

The documents reveal that Dennis King, who died last year, had 27 sexual offences to his name by the time the force admitted it was using him as a 'registered informant'.

The documents reveal King – whose 1980s 'Shoebury Sex Ring' has been linked to Jason Swift murder suspect Lennie Smith – was once convicted of owning illegal pornographic images of sex with a human corpse.

The founder of one of Britain's leading child abuse charities said the YA's revelations should change policing forever.

Peter Saunders, from NAPAC (National Association for People Abused in Childhood), said: "Police must never use the lives and the safety of children as bartering chips to maintain the flow of information. What planet are these people on that they could even consider doing this? You couldn't make this up. It's like a real life Line of Duty."

UNMASKED: Exclusive photo of Dennis King, exposed by the Yellow Advertiser, as an Essex Police informer who had more than 50 convictions for child sex offences, possessing images of sex with a corpse, and more.

The release of King's criminal record came days after police told one of his victims he would not receive justice for his years of violent sexual abuse.

The man – nicknamed Victim Six – was a victim of a paedophile ring led by King in the 1980s, which the authorities dubbed the 'Shoebury Sex Ring'. His story was corroborated by hundreds of pages of official documents from a 1989-91 investigation into the ring, none of which have ever been placed in the public domain.

The paperwork even included Social Services records which said other children had told child protection workers in 1990 that they had seen Victim Six with the paedophiles. But police have marked his case for no further action, saying it does not meet the 'evidential test'.

The YA revealed earlier this year that in 1993, a police officer had admitted to a children's charity that King was a 'registered informant' and expressed concern that senior officers were trying to suppress further investigation of his crimes.

The YA knew King was a convicted paedophile but did not have access to his criminal record.

Government files show King was first convicted as a juvenile, aged 11, of burglary.

His first sexual offence was committed at age 23, in 1958, with more sex offences following in 1959, 1963, 1964, 1966, 1971, 1972, 1975, 1978 and 1982.

His sex offences were interwoven with years of convictions for theft, fraud, receiving stolen goods, burglary and causing ABH.

In 1990 he was convicted of running the Shoebury ring but received a generous plea bargain which saw his potential life sentenced chopped down to four years.

After his release, he racked up another 25 years of convictions for offences including taking indecent photographs of children, indecently assaulting children and possessing images of sex with a corpse.

Mr Saunders said: "It is outrageous that the police could even consider using a man with such an abhorrent background as any sort of informant. It's almost beyond belief."

Fossetts event raises the roof for social housing

by Michael Cox

basildon@yellowad.co.uk

A CAMPAIGN group calling for more social housing protested in Southend this week as a consultation meeting was held for a proposed development.

Members of Fossetts for the People attended a public consultation event at Southend Civic Centre on Monday.

The event was held to give people the chance to view plans for a 130 home development on land in Fossetts Way.

The meeting was organised by public body Homes England, which is preparing an outline planning application on land adjacent to the site proposed for Southend United's new stadium.

The campaign group demonstrated outside the meeting, carrying placards.

Mike Fieldhouse, one of the group members, said: "We have only got a limited amount of land in Southend and we would like houses built for people in Southend, predominantly social housing.

"We think that will bring down the rents.

"It is publicly owned land so we are keen to see this land used to sort out the problem."

PROTEST: Fossetts for the People campaign group in Southend Civic Centre

Mr Fieldhouse added that homes need to be "easily affordable" for younger generations so they are "not forced to move away".

The land had been owned by Southend University Hospital NHS Trust, with planning permission approved in 2005 for a diagnostic and treatment centre on the site.

But this use never materialised and now Homes England has been forming its plans for the site since the start of this year.

The site is listed on Homes England's Land Hub, which shows development sites it plans to bring to market and make available to developers.

On its website, the body describes itself as the government's "housing accelerator" and is responsible for increasing the number of new homes built in England.

It also lists among its responsibilities "helping to stimulate local economic growth by using our land and investment".

A spokeswoman for Homes England said it has produced a proposed masterplan for the site after working with Historic England and Southend Council.

"We are committed to providing homes to meet the needs of the local community and a minimum of 30 per cent affordable homes is planned for this development in line with local policy.

"We value feedback from the community and will consider all views before submitting our application for outline planning later this year."

Mr Fieldhouse also claimed the consultation event had been "hastily arranged" after it was advertised to the public ten days beforehand.

But the Homes England spokeswoman said the event was planned for a long time and advertised on June 7 in line with national policy.

She said: "This is the first engagement and the ten day period is common practice."

Safety concerns following two Southend fires

FIREFIGHTERS have issued safety advice to residents after being called to two fires in Southend caused by unattended cooking on one night.

The Essex fire service were called to a flat in Manilla Road, Southend just after 2.20am last Wednesday after two large pots of cooking had been left on a hob overnight to slow cook but had dried out and caught alight.

A spokesman for Essex County Fire and Rescue Service said the fire caused a lot of smoke which filled the flat and the communal corridor.

The incident came just hours after fire crews were called by neighbours to a house fire on Inverness Avenue, Westcliff shortly before 8.40pm.

Firefighters gained access to the property, after reporting the kitchen was heavily smoke logged, and removed a burning pan from on top of the hob. The occupants were not home at the time but neighbours were alerted by a smoke alarm.

Crew manager Kim Polley, of Southend Fire Station, said: "Over 75 per cent of all accidental house fires in Essex start in the kitchen and they can lead to absolute devastation so we want to remind everyone in Essex of some simple cooking fire safety advice."

On the Inverness Avenue incident, she added: "It is thanks to their working smoke alarm that this didn't turn into a really serious and damaging house fire."

Among the advice given by the fire service to residents is to take pans off the heat if you need to leave the kitchen while cooking, and avoid leaving children alone in the kitchen when cooking on the hob.

The fire service spokesman said: "Make sure saucepan handles don't stick out – so they don't get knocked off the stove.

"Take care if you're wearing loose clothing – this can easily catch fire."

People are also advised to keep tea towels and cloths away from the cooker and hob.

NEWS IN BRIEF

TWO weeks of road closures are taking place near the Bell junction this month.

Southend Council announced that access to Denton Approach to and from the eastbound A127 will be closed, as well as the right-hand turn at the traffic lights from the westbound A127 into Rochford Road.

The council said the closures, which started on Saturday, June 15, were for traffic surveys in preparation for work to improve the junction.

The A127 will remain open in both directions.

CANVEY Town Council is organising its annual Canvey Island Armed Forces Day later this month to celebrate the contribution of the armed forces in the community.

The parade will start from Castle View School's car park in Foksville Road from 10.30am on Saturday, June 30 and will march through the town centre on Furtherwick Road and Long Road to the Paddocks Community Centre.

A thanksgiving service will be held at 11am outside at the Paddocks War Memorial which will be supported by Canvey Community Choir.

There will be a temporary rolling road closure along the parade route from 10.30am to 11am on the day.

Little Havens gets £20,000 donation

by Michael Cox

basildon@yellowad.co.uk

A FUNDRAISING group set up by a Hornchurch mum in memory of her daughter has donated equipment and cash to a hospice.

Little Havens Hospice in Thundersley, which provides care for children who are nearing the end of their lives, was presented with two Safe Space beds and money for garden furniture by Joni's Army.

Joni's Army, which has raised £20,000 for Little Havens, was set up by Holly Stevens in memory of her daughter Joni-Mai.

In 2011, Joni-Mai was diagnosed with Ewings Sarcoma - a rare form of bone cancer - when she was five years old.

She was cared for at Little Havens across the next four years and died in September 2015 at the hospice.

Joni-Mai's family decided to honour her memory by setting up a charity in her name to help children with life-limiting illnesses by fundraising for equipment for them and charities like Little Havens.

Holly, 33, said: "Joni was an incredible little girl, regardless of what she was going through she was like sunshine - always brightening our days."

"Her courage and kindness spurred us on to create something amazing in her name; so, we started Joni's Army."

DONATION: Members of Joni's Army present one of the beds to Lauren Summers

"We try and help children and young people access medical treatment and equipment that does not fall under the umbrella of the NHS."

Deputy ward sister at Little Havens, Lauren Summers, joined Holly to receive the donation.

Lauren said: "We are all very excited about the arrival of our two new Safe Space beds and would really like to thank everyone at Joni's Army who has helped make this happen."

"Like everyone, the children we care for at Little Havens are not the same size or shape as each other and they have a preference of where they sleep - it isn't a case of one bed suits all.

"We have to care for a range of different needs and abilities, including children who may experience seizures as part of their condition, so to be gifted these highly specialist Safe Space beds by Joni's Army is amazing."

"Here at Little Havens, we focus on the individual needs of the children we care for and these beds will help us do that when it comes to sleep because they can be adapted to suit quite a few of our children and young people."

Kirsty has award win

RECOGNITION: Kirsty Fields

THE founder of a group that supports Southend's homeless has been recognised for her efforts.

Kirsty Fields formed Off the Streets last year, which saw a group of residents come together in a bid to help homeless people.

It opened a night shelter for rough sleepers on London Road, Westcliff and Kirsty said it has now helped to house 41 people.

Kirsty was shortlisted for the people's choice community safety hero award, which recognised people from the county who have made an outstanding contribution to community safety.

The Southend resident was named as runner-up when the awards were presented at the Police, Fire and Crime Commissioner for Essex's annual conference.

Kirsty said: "I could not walk past someone who is on the street and the most important thing is saying 'how are you?'"

"Time is very precious."

The group now has more than 30 volunteers and Kirsty said it is now going into schools and giving presentations.

'Police failed me'

by Charles Thomson

EXCLUSIVE

VICTIM SIX didn't approach the police. The police came to him. That's what he can't understand. They tracked him down, dredged up his childhood trauma and then, in his view, abandoned him. He can't shake the feeling that their enthusiasm dissipated when he started telling them he'd been repeatedly sexually abused by a Southend police officer.

Two years later, he is considering a formal complaint and legal action against the force, saying it disrupted his life and then left him without justice.

What led the police to Victim Six's front door is not known. What is known is that as a child, in the 1980s, he was sexually abused by paedophile ring, which the authorities later dubbed the 'Shoebury Sex Ring'.

To date, the Yellow Advertiser has unearthed six documents written in 1990/91 which name him as a victim of the ring. Four of those documents were authored by council officers at Essex Social Services, the other two by charities supporting the victims. His name was given by other children who'd seen him with the paedophiles.

It was spring 2017 when an officer knocked on Victim Six's door, asked him to confirm his name and that he'd grown up in Shoeburyness, then suggested they go inside. Once settled in the living room, the officer asked Victim Six whether he'd ever known anybody by the names of Dennis King or Brian Tanner. His initial shock soon gave way to a flood of tears.

In spring 1989, two men – King, from Shoebury, and Tanner, from Westcliff (both now dead) – were charged with buggery and conspiracy, accused of selling sex with underage boys to a network of paedophiles.

In therapy sessions with local charities, the initial 14 victims began to disclose the names of other children they'd seen with the abusers. By January 1990, there were more than 40 suspected victims. The children also provided intelligence about the wider paedophile network: nicknames, addresses, meeting points.

But police decided not to speak to the majority of the victims, saying they considered the matter dealt with by way of the 'specimen charges' King and Tanner already faced. Then, on what should have been the first day of their trial, both men accepted generous plea deals reducing the buggery charges – carrying a maximum sentence of life in prison – to attempted buggery, and dropping the conspiracy charge.

Their lawyers claimed the children were prostitutes who instigated their own abuse. The judge accepted that argument and said there had been little psychological damage. King got four years, Tanner got three. The charities never saw any evidence of a proper investigation into the wider ring.

Over the next 25 years they tried unsuccessfully to get newspapers and broadcasters to look at their concerns. Then, in 2015, the YA ran a series of front page stories about out-of-court settlements Essex Council had been paying for alleged historic abuse. One of the whistleblowers thought we might be the right outlet to look into their concerns.

The YA's successful Shoebury investigation was born out of a confluence of circumstances.

Government had just created 'Police and Crime Commissioners', replacing police authorities as the political watchdogs for police forces. In Essex, former intelligence officer Nick Alston was elected and had made a commitment to transparency. He hired two former crime reporters to 'crawl all over the soft underbelly of Essex Police' and ordered the publication of quarterly reports on officers who committed misconduct. He was the perfect person to demand a reinvestigation of Shoebury – and the YA, long despised by Essex Police, had developed a good relationship with his office.

INVESTIGATION: Victim Six as a boy and former police watchdog Nick Alston

What moved Mr Alston most, he said, was the discovery that so many of the victims – smeared during the court process and dismissed as having suffered no real damage – were now dead from suicides and overdoses or had gone on to live chaotic, criminal lives.

"For me, that is one of the great sadnesses in all this," he said. "They're in prison, they died of heroin, they're on the street. How do you escape from something like that? The chances of escape are pretty slight."

Thanks to Mr Alston's intervention, Essex Police announced a formal review of the Shoebury case. Five new victims came forward. King, now in his 80s, was arrested. Whistleblowers gave officers a stack of documents they'd kept from the original case, containing detailed intelligence about a wider paedophile network and of alleged police corruption linked to the ring.

The fresh allegations sparked a police investigation dubbed Operation SANDS. It was under the banner of Operation SANDS that police arrived at Victim Six's door.

At first, he was reluctant to engage, harbouring an understandable distrust of police officers from his childhood. But roughly six months later, upon learning the case was to be closed down with no charges filed, he changed his mind. He had assumed the police wouldn't need him. Now he feared abusers would remain at large when his testimony might have helped convict them. He wrote to police saying he was now prepared to cooperate.

But a lot had changed since Operation SANDS began in early 2016. Nick Alston had left political office. His replacement, Roger Hirst, had immediately shut down several of the his predecessor's transparency measures. The misconduct reports were no longer published. Regular public scrutiny events to hold the Chief Constable to account were stopped. The former crime reporters disappeared from the PCC's office.

The week Victim Six agreed to cooperate, the detective who'd been leading Operation SANDS went off on long-term sick. Months later, the senior officer she'd answered to was moved to a new department.

From October 2017, when Victim Six offered to cooperate, to that December, he received no word from Essex Police, despite frequent follow-up phone calls. When the YA asked why he had not been contacted, two officers visited his home. But his repeated requests to take part in a filmed ABE ('achieving best evidence') interview, which formally commences a police investigation, went unfulfilled.

Eight months after his offer to cooperate, when Victim Six had still not been given an ABE, the YA found him a pro bono solicitor, who wrote to Essex Police and threatened the force with a formal complaint if the interview was not swiftly arranged.

The first ABE eventually took place on July 24, 2018, at Rayleigh police station, but the process continued in fits and starts after that point. Follow-up interviews were scheduled weeks – on one occasion more than 40 days – apart, and police twice cancelled appointments on the day, blaming childcare problems.

The sessions finally concluded in November. Days later, Dennis King died, aged 83. The process had dragged on so long that the officers had lost any chance to interrogate the prime suspect in Victim Six's abuse.

The YA conducted hours of its own interviews with Victim Six, then checked them against hundreds of pages of original documents retained by the whistleblowers. We produced a 96-page 'corroboration document', listing all of the key details, never placed in the public domain, which Victim Six was able to accurately recount. But last week, a detective wrote to Victim Six's lawyer, saying: "My decision is that the case cannot meet the evidential test required to proceed and, as such, Essex Police will not be taking any further action."

But Victim Six feels the investigation was inadequate. He knows key witnesses were never spoken to. His offer to drive around with officers and identify addresses was blanked. The now-retired Southend police officer who he says abused him - who he named and made detailed allegations about from the very first time police arrived at his home - was never arrested or interviewed.

Essex Police responded to Victim Six's planned legal action and IOPC complaint by saying it was 'disappointed' and suggesting he register a complaint via the force's website. It insisted there had been an 'extensive investigation'. The decision to abandon his case came a month after two former Essex Police child abuse officers were jailed for deliberately blocking investigations.

Days after Victim Six's case was shut down, it was announced that the YA was at risk of closure and our newspaper for the week ending June 21, 2019, would likely be the last edition we ever printed.

The following day, the YA won a years-long legal battle with multiple Government departments to force the release of the full criminal record of Dennis King, the registered police informant who had led the Shoebury Sex Ring. The documents revealed

King had 46 criminal convictions prior to the Shoebury investigation, 20 of which were for sex offences.

King continued to commit sexual offences into his old age, including sexually abusing and taking indecent pictures of children, possessing child pornography and owning images of sexual activity with a corpse. He was facing prosecution for child sex offences in 2018 when he discovered he was terminally ill. He died in November 2018 from complications linked to AIDS, sparking fears for the health of the many children he abused in his lifetime.

MRI scans help take the guesswork out of pain

FOLLOWING months of being in pain, Essex businessman Michael*, was desperate for answers to what was causing his back pain. Self-employed, he was unable to take extended time off from work but was concerned not knowing what was causing his pain might be making the problem worse and was stopping him from receiving the most effective treatment.

Here, he tells his story:

"I work all over the country running my business and when my back started to hurt in 2017, I just put it down to sitting down all of the time and driving. But the pain, and limited movement, got worse and worse and I started to worry about being able to work at all.

"My doctor did their best, but it was guesswork really to find out what was wrong and causing the pain, so it was difficult to get an effective treatment plan together and a referral to the hospital was going to take months. Painkillers didn't really work and exercise and physio didn't seem to be effective either. I began to get worried it was something more sinister and it started to prey on my mind.

"A friend of mine mentioned he'd had an MRI scan which had helped them find out what was causing pain in his shoulder and neck and I knew there was a scanning centre locally, so I went online to MRI Plus in Leigh-on-Sea. It's literally a few miles from where I live in Essex and I found out I could book an appointment myself online, which I did, for the next day. This was all great, as I travel so much.

"As I didn't want to wait any longer than necessary, I also made an appointment with the in-house GP for a private consultation. She was great and saw me the next day. We talked about whether an MRI scan, ultrasound or X-ray would be best to help diagnose my problem and she referred me for an MRI scan. I did everything all on the one day, which was really convenient. Everyone was so friendly, from the receptionist who helped me make my appointment, through to the radiographer.

"I chose to have my results sent to my own GP, and it was a great relief to find out there was nothing too serious to worry about. And I had the results within two days too. Now we knew exactly what was causing the pain in my back, my doctor could refer me to the right people to help.

"My back is almost completely sorted now and I'm no longer worried about missing work. Being able to make an appointment at a local centre, at a time that was suitable for me and where I could be referred straight through for my scan was brilliant."

Do you want to find out what's causing your pain? An MRI, Ultrasound or X-Ray may be able to find the source of your discomfort.

What do I need?

You can be referred for a self-pay MRI scan by your healthcare professional (a consultant, GP, osteopath, chiropractor or physiotherapist). They'll give you a referral letter telling us which body area needs to be scanned to find the cause of your pain. You can also book your own private MRI scan – all we need are the details of a health professional to send your results to.

How much is it and how do I pay?

MRI scans start at £199, ultrasounds from £60 and x-rays from £49. Costs will vary dependent on which type of scan you require and how many body areas require scanning. And if you don't already have a healthcare professionals' referral, our private GP service offers fast access to experienced male and female doctors and appointments at a time convenient for you. Our GPs can make direct referrals to MRI Plus services such as MRI, X-Ray and Ultrasound scans and can make onward referrals if requested.

For further details call us on 01702 410017 or book online at www.mriplus.co.uk

Quote the Reference: YELLOW to enjoy a £20 discount on our MRI scan prices.

Where are we?

Our Essex scanning centre is within The Chartwell Private Hospital in Leigh-on-Sea, which is accessible from both A13 and A127 and has easy train access. We have free car parking on site.

She was in training for a charity bike ride when the incident took place and died in hospital from her injuries the following day.

Her family said in a statement released by Essex Police that she was trying to raise money for Tommy's charity.

In a statement, Jay's family said: "Jay was tragically killed in a collision while she was training to complete a 100-mile charity bike ride in honour of Tommy's charity.

"She was a dearly loved daughter, sister, auntie and friend to everyone that knew her.

"Jay worked as a global compliance officer at Ocean Connect who were her second family.

"She was a selfless, bubbly, intelligent girl who loved spending time with her family and friends. She enjoyed listening to music, dancing and was a fantastic artist.

"All Jay's family members and friends are deeply shocked and saddened by her loss.

"We are finding comfort by continuing to raise money on Jay's behalf."

LIFESTYLE

20 years of Irish magic

RHYTHM Of The Dance, the spectacular Irish dance show, is celebrating its 20th anniversary and comes to Basildon's Towngate Theatre on Friday June 21.

Created in 1999, Rhythm Of The Dance is a spectacular two-hour dance and music celebration of Irish culture; full of flailing feet and fiddles, futuristic dances, eye-catching lighting and costumes, and sensational sound effects. This stunning show is inspired by the epic journey of the Irish Celts throughout history, and is considered one of the top 3 Irish step dance shows in the world.

With a dazzling 25 costume changes, this music and dance extravaganza - featuring world champion dancers and traditional Irish band and the show presents the ancient and modern by combining traditional dance and music with state of the art technology to give audiences of all ages a unique experience.

The multi-award winning show has performed to over 7 million people in more than 50 countries across the globe.

Dane McKiernan is choreographer and lead dancer in the show. Dane has been dancing since he was six and began touring the world in 2007 with the National Dance Company of Ireland's Rhythm of the Dance.

In 2009 he joined Riverdance and in 2012 was part of the modern Irish dance group Prodigy which won Sky TV's Got to Dance.

He subsequently toured with Prodigy in the show Footstorm and returned to Rhythm of the Dance in 2014 as lead dancer and choreographer.

His fellow lead dancer is Amy Marie Prior. Amy turned professional when she was 18 and completed her first tour in Russia and Europe in 2015 and in 2016 joined Rhythm of the Dance as lead female dancer.

The dancers are among the most accomplished Irish dancers in the world. Rhythm of the Dance is proud to boast numerous national, international and world champion dancers; their dedication to the art form of Irish dance is clearly evident onstage.

With their graceful movement and disciplined control they make the complex choreography look easy; what is not evident is the off-stage commitment required to reach the pinnacle of Irish dance demanded by the show.

With the rigours of touring - often every night of the week - and constant rehearsals and practice, working and re-working routines mean a 24/7 dedication.

These super-fit dancers deliver a thrilling, driving performance onstage every time.

DIEGO FILM LACKS PUNCH

DIEGO MARADONA (12A, 127 mins) Documentary.

LONDON-BORN filmmaker Asif Kapadia collected numerous awards including two Baftas for his turbo-charged documentary Senna, which constructed a multi-faceted portrait of sporting genius from hours of race footage, photographs, interviews and archive material.

Three years later, he collected another Bafta and an Academy Award for his deeply moving and provocative account of the rise and fall of Amy Winehouse, which candidly addressed the singer's bruising battle with drug and alcohol addiction.

In his impeccably-constructed new documentary, Kapadia focuses on a deeply divisive figure, who emerged from the rubble of his spectacular self-destruction and has continued to make headlines off the football pitch.

Diego Maradona begins on July 5 1984 with grainy footage of cars slaloming at speed through the winding streets of Naples bound for the Stadio San Paolo.

Twenty-three year-old Diego Armando Maradona is about to be unveiled to more than 75,000 frenzied fans of ailing Serie A side SSC Napoli.

Club president Corrado Ferlaino has paid a record-breaking £6.9 million to Barcelona, hoping that the Argentinian striker can loosen the stranglehold of clubs in northern Italy over the league.

Maradona's superstar status doesn't extend to lavish perks.

"I asked for a Ferrari and got a Fiat," jokes the footballer in a voiceover.

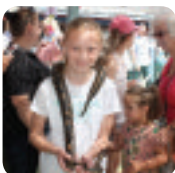

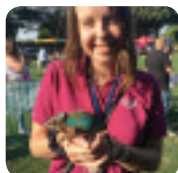

Diego Maradona lacks the emotional gut punch of Senna and Amy, but is nonetheless a compelling snapshot of a self-made celebrity, who precipitated his own demise.

The intriguing dilemma of Maradona's divided loyalty, exemplified by his captaincy of Argentina against Italy at the 1990 World Cup, isn't fully addressed on screen and remains a tantalising loose thread.

On this one occasion, Kapadia's film fails to emulate its charismatic subject and score in front of open goal.

You don't have to be a property professional to BUY or SELL at AUCTION

Auction is a great way to sell your property FAST for Full Market Value

"After months of difficulty trying to sell my property via estate agents in what is currently a challenging and fragile economy climate, I turned to the Auction House. This was my first experience in auction and I have to say I would recommend anyone who is considering selling their property to go to the Auction House in the first instance. The customer service I received from the team was first class and they made the whole process simple and smooth for me. We also achieved a fantastic outcome which was beyond our expectations".

Agent Directory

Record Q1 results at Auction House

Auction House, the UK's leading national and regional property auctioneer – which has a branch in Essex – has delivered its best ever first quarter sales in the 12 year history of the company.

The group sold 762 lots between January and March 2019 – up 5.5% on the previous year – at a success rate of 74.4%, and raising £87.9 million in the process.

Director, Andrew Stallard said: “These are remarkable figures for Auction House – particularly at a time when the industry is reporting a 10-15% drop in sales. Once again, Auction House continues to buck market trends, confound the critics, and exceed expectations.”

“Certainly regional auctions are gaining in popularity as more local sellers switch to the auction room for a faster result. The appeal of speed and certainty is the big attraction – typically just two months from instruction to completion – compared with around five months or even longer, via estate agents.”

The month of March also delivered well for the group, with 243 lots sold (242 in March 2018), at a success rate of 71.3% with £29.1 million raised. Andrew explained: “Matching last year's sold result in March is a powerful outcome amidst unprecedented political turmoil over Brexit. We put that success down to our unique combination of local knowledge, regional expertise and national strength, which enables our winning performance to be maintained year on year.”

The number of entries into the group's April sales is also up on last year. There are currently 528 listings to date – a marked rise from 485 in April 2018.

Andrew added: “Our auction rooms are buoyant, with buyers finding properties that are ideal for their requirements. Prices are keener than they have been, lower land values are bringing builders back into the market, and undoubtedly there are some bargain opportunities out there.”

“Overall, our results across the regions have held up extremely well, despite what pundits have been saying about property transactions being hard hit. With Easter upon us, we are now entering the spring market and I expect interest to strengthen further – especially when our Brexit future becomes clear.”

New Audi A6 allroad on the way

By David Whinyates

THE latest generation of Audi's legendary A6 allroad quattro will hit Britain's byways and highways later this year with prices starting from around £55,000.

This fourth generation of the go-anywhere estate car builds on the recently-launched A6 Avant but is a very different beast indeed.

It comes with standard quattro all-wheel drive, eight speed Tiptronic auto transmission, adaptive air suspension and increased ground clearance.

The adaptive air suspension with controlled damping has been tuned specifically for the A6 allroad quattro and can increase the ride height by up to 45mm depending on the road speed and mode set in the Audi drive select system.

In auto and comfort modes, the A6 allroad quattro sets off at standard ride height with a ground clearance of 139mm, which is then actively adjusted according to speed. If the highest ride height is selected at speeds of up to 22mph, the body is raised 45 mm. The body is lowered automatically when this speed is exceeded. At motorway speeds of above 74mph, the ride height is lowered by 15 mm.

If the driver sets off in offroad mode, which covers speeds up to 49mph, the body is 30 mm higher than the normal ride height. Travelling at very slow speeds below 22mph, lift mode adds another 15 mm, raising the ground clearance 45 mm above the normal position.

In addition to the specially adapted suspension, the A6 allroad quattro offers additional comfort features including standard hill descent control and tilt angle assist. When negotiating light terrain, the driver can call up a display on the MMI monitor, which shows the tilt angle in the longitudinal and transverse directions and if the vehicle is at risk of tipping over, a warning appears.

Two V6 diesel engines with 48v mild hybrid technology and power outputs of 228 and 282bhp will be available initially and the allroad will come in either Sport trim or as a more comprehensively equipped Vorsprung model.

Spanish midfielder in for Hammers

WEST HAM UNITED have paid a fee in the region of 24m for the highly-rated attacking midfielder, Pablo Fornals, from Villarreal.

The 23-year-old Spaniard had interested a number of big clubs, including Arsenal - however, it was the Hammers won the race for his signature on a five-year deal, with an option of a further 12 months.

Castellon-born Fornals becomes the Hammers second-most-expensive signing, behind Felipe Anderson. He will represent Spain at this summer's UEFA European U21 Championship finals.

Speaking to www.whufc.com, Fornals enthused: "I'm very happy to be part of West Ham. I feel very good, very happy and very grateful for the opportunity that has been provided to me. I want the club to continue giving opportunities to young and ambitious people, people who want to do well for the long term. I know about the loyal fans and the stadium, which is a beautiful stadium. The fans fill the stadium every weekend and that is something admirable, especially with the passion with which football is lived there.

"I have worked with Mario (Husillos) before - I know him from when I was in Malaga.

Of course, Manuel was a big influence because in the end, he is one of the best coaches in the world and who doesn't want to work with people like that?" Fornals made his full international debut for Spain against Switzerland in May 2016. He initially arrived at Villarreal from Malaga in July 2017 and is seen as one of Spanish football's brightest emerging talents.
